International application No. PCT/EP02/14711

Ad section V:

Present application relates to a method of storing video data with the aid of an SDRAM.

The unique document cited in the international search report is FR-A-2 578 674. In this document digitized video is alternately line-by-line stored in buffer memories and subsequently line-by-line retrieved from said memories.

Present application describes and claims a method in which the video signals are divided into a plurality of parallel data streams, which are time compressed so as to be shorter than a write/read cycle of the memory. The stored video data being then read stored in a FIFO and recombined in a multiplexer.

The step of time compressing the data- e.g. 4 data streams will provide a  $\frac{1}{4}$  time compression- allows to cope with an video data input rate and allows to use a lower clock frequency to write into the memory.

This step is neither known from nor rendered obvious by the teachings of D1
